Our Team Goals:

- Develop a proposed set of characteristics of a Lehman graduate.
- Establish how, going forward, these characteristics will be used to implement interdisciplinary and integrative student learning across the college.

Characteristics of a Lehman Graduate

Lehman students will

1. Become engaged citizens who contribute to their local, national and global communities.
2. Demonstrate outstanding communication skills in diverse media.
3. Utilize critical thinking skills.
4. Demonstrate competence within at least one discipline.
5. Demonstrate the ability to use quantitative reasoning.
6. Demonstrate the ability to work collaboratively as part of a team.
7. Demonstrate skills in information literacy and research.

Interdisciplinary and Integrative Student Learning

- “Active learning” classes
- “Collaborative learning” classes
- “Overlay” classes
- Interdisciplinary minors
- Learning communities
- E-portfolios
- Undergraduate Research

Process Goals:

- Begin process with an Integrative Learning Council (ILC) responsible for ongoing implementation.
- Recognize areas in need of development to assure students graduate with identified characteristics.
 - Compile an inventory of Lehman's integrative learning initiatives
 - Compile an inventory of learning objectives of each course that are related to the development of the Lehman characteristics.
 - Assess learning outcomes related to the Lehman characteristics in upper level courses.
